Canada Revenue Agency (CRA) Selects Crawford Technologies Inc. for PDF Conversion

Toronto, Ontario, March 8, 2007. Crawford Technologies Inc., a leader in print-stream transform, extraction and manipulation solutions, today announced that Canada Revenue Agency (CRA) has awarded Crawford Technologies a contract for software to assist CRA in managing their taxpayer documents. The solution allows CRA employees to view PDF files dynamically created from mainframe AFP print data.

CRA issued a Request for Proposal in January 2006, which resulted in the award of a contract to Crawford Technologies Inc. for z/OS document conversion, splitting and full integration into Customer Information Control System (CICS) on multiple mainframes, including Disaster Recovery systems.

“We are very pleased to have the Canada Revenue Agency, an organization of national importance, among our clients” said Ernie Crawford, President of Crawford Technologies Inc., adding “CrawfordTech PRO AFP software delivers unmatched performance and data integrity that CRA requires to serve the needs of its vast client base.”

About Canada Revenue Agency (CRA) The Canada Revenue Agency (CRA) is the principal revenue collector for the federal government. Annually, CRA collects over $300 billion in taxes and other revenues and distributes close to $12.5 billion in benefit payments to millions of families and individuals on behalf of the federal, provincial, and territorial governments, as well as First Nations. CRA employs up to 42,000 employees across Canada.
